CELEB CAMP IS DRUG PARADISE

THE I'm A Celebrity gang are in for a high old time if they nibble the local plant life. Their jungle camp area boasts enough Aboriginal magic herbs to send the celebs - who include two ex-addicts - into the stratosphere faster than any illegal club drug. Aborigines have been tripping out for thousands of years to get themselves into a state called "Dream Time".

WAITING GAME: Chirac

Jacques the cad

FRENCH president Jacques Chirac kept fed-up Tony Blair waiting in the rain for more than 20 minutes yesterday.

Mr Chirac, 71, arrived late for a ceremonial reception at the start of a two-day official visit to London as guest of the Queen to celebrate 100 years of the Anglo-French alliance.

An awkward Mr Blair was left standing with the Duke of Edinburgh but conversation quickly dried up.

In a speech later, Mr Chirac told Mr Blair and President George Bush: "We must avoid confusion between democratisation and westernisation."

LISTEN UP: Prince Charles hit back

PRINCE Charles was branded "old-fashioned and out of time" in an astonishing battle of the big ears with a Cabinet Minister yesterday.

In a furious tirade, Education Secretary Charles Clarke said the "patronising" heir to the throne should "think carefully" before speaking out, and sneered: "We can't all be born King."

The bitter spat between the pair – both famed for their flapping lugholes – erupted after the Prince criticised modern schooling.

In a note read out at an industrial tribunal brought by former Palace secretary Elaine Day, 45, who claims sexual harassment, the 56-year-old Prince claimed teachers encourage kids to want to be pop stars or TV presenters.

In a BBC Radio 4 interview, Mr Clarke said of Charles: "I think he is very old-fashioned and out of time."

But the Prince told tourism chiefs yesterday that "old-fashioned views are coming round again".

And the Tories branded Mr Clarke's attack as "unworthy" of a Minister of the Crown.

CRACKDOWN ON KID KNIFE LOUTS

Thugs face bodysearch by teachers

YOB pupils will face bodysearches in a crack-down on knives in schools.

And staff will be able to use metal detectors to check for weapons.

Education Secretary Charles Clarke announced the tough measures as part of a wide-ranging offensive to battle classroom louts yesterday.

In a hard-hitting speech to teachers, Mr Clarke, 56, said: "Most pupils never carry knives, either in or out of school. But there are a few who ignore the fact that it is against the law to have a knife in school."

Dumped

"This is unacceptable and no school should tolerate it."

Mr Clarke also wants posh schools to accept yob pupils kicked out elsewhere.

The Education Secretary is worried that "sink schools" because no other heads will accept them.

But Shadow Education Secretary Tim Collins, 40, said: "Charles Clarke must be the only man in Britain who thinks that putting more unruly pupils into schools will improve discipline."

Mr Clarke also attacked parents who "run to a lawyer" to launch a compensation claim whenever something goes wrong in a school.

Other measures include powers for headteachers to call in police for instant weapons searches, zero tolerance of bullying and tougher rules to protect teachers from violence and abuse.

Mr Clarke said: "I fully back heads in tackling poor behaviour and enforcing discipline in the classroom."

The National Association of Head Teachers backed the knife crackdown.

Hoon 'hols' uproar

DEFENCE Secretary Geoff Hoon is facing a freebie row after taking his wife on an official Far East visit at taxpayers' expense.

The cost of the five-day visit to India and Pakistan was more than £78,000.

MoD chiefs defended the move saying Elaine Hoon attended diplomatic engagements, visited schools and did not travel to Pakistan.

The 54-year-old minister was accompanied by MoD officials. But Matthew Elliott, of the Taxpayers' Alliance, said last night: "Taxpayers will be very concerned about this."

HIGH, I'M A CELEB!

THE I'm A Celeb jungle in Australia is paradise – for junkies!

It boasts enough Aboriginal "magic herbs" to send the contestants into "dream time".

At least five super-potent plants and trees grow in the lush tropical forest at Sara Nathan in Murwillumbah, where the stars will be camped.

would only need to pick the right plant to get a high more powerful than any illegal club drug like cocaine, ecstasy or LSD.

Aborigines have been tripping on plants such as Blue Cypress for thousands of years.

Dr Robert Lawlor, who is a world expert on Aboriginal spirituality, said the herbs help them get into "dream time".

It's a holy trance-like state where they can connect with their ancestors.

He adds: "Aborigines use plant substances to achieve altered states of consciousness but for the most part this aspect of their tradition has been kept secret."

"They believe that the plants and trees sing to humans silently."

Herbs such as Fo-Ti-Teng, Blue Cypress, Ayahuasca, Salvia Divinorum and Yohimbe are used in secret ceremonies and are said to be more potent than marijuana, cocaine, ecstasy or LSD. The camp has been carefully screened by health and safety officers for potential hazards and dangerous snakes and creepy-crawlies.

Plants

But it would be near impossible to classify and remove every magic herb.

A show insider said: "There's no doubt the plants are out there."

"It's not illegal to eat a few jungle herbs, but I'm not sure how good that would look on TV."

"Maybe a few of the contestants would handle it well, but I could imagine some losing the plot."

"It could make great TV but it would set a bad example to kids back home."

Model Sophie Anderton has already had her highs and lows with drugs.

The 27-year-old kicked her cocaine habit this summer with professional help.

She has kept on the straight and narrow thanks to regular trips to Narcotics Anonymous.

YOU RACIST

by IAIN BURCHELL

DISGUSTED England fans last night demanded world football chiefs throw the book at Spain and their racist supporters.

They want the Spanish thugs and their team booted out of the 2006 World Cup and claimed: "You wouldn't think twice if it was England."

Outraged fans say Spain must not be allowed to get away with the disgraceful torrent of racial abuse hurled at England's black stars during Wednesday night's friendly.

Incredibly, the Spanish authorities tried to blame us for the race row yesterday.

Comments in the English press about Spain boss Luis Aragones branding Thierry Henry a "black s" had sparked the abuse, they said.

England fans reckon we would have been red-carded from the next World Cup if our fans had been responsible for the shameful taunts.

Furious

And most say they would have backed Sven's men if they had walked off the Bernabeu pitch in protest. Furious fan Matthew Hall, 26, of Holloway, north London, summed up the feelings of millions.

He said: "Spain should be thrown out of the World Cup in Germany to let their fans know racism is unacceptable – and Madrid should be told it's got no chance of staging the 2012 Olympics."

"UEFA threatened to kick us out of Euro 2004 if hooligans went on the rampage in Portugal and I'm sure they would have done it without hesitation."

"Now let's see if they and FIFA dare to take the same hard line when it comes to Spain."

England fans, the FA and the Government have vowed to pile pressure on FIFA and UEFA

CALLS cost 25p from a BT landline. Lines close at midnight. Texts cost 25p plus network operator rates. More than 84 per cent of readers yesterday said they believe the CSA is a sham.

to make sure the racism is severely punished. They say the football authorities have to send out a clear message to stop a repeat of the monkey noises and shameful chants.

British Sports Minister Richard Caborn led the storm of anger saying he was "absolutely appalled".

And a petition has been set up by fans urging FIFA to take "all necessary action to kick racism out of football".

Last night FIFA issued a statement calling for an explanation from Spanish soccer bosses.

Disgust

It said: "We will demand explanations from the Spanish Football Association so we can examine the incidents and clarify whether the statutes, regulations and code of ethics of FIFA have been violated."

Insiders say the Spaniards will probably be hit with a minimum £15,000 fine or be ordered to play their next competitive match behind closed doors.

FA spokesman Adrian Bevington said: "Football as a whole should stand up and express its disgust at what has gone on here."

He added: "Sadly we have seen something that we have not seen in England for the best part of 20 years."

Mr Caborn has written to his Spanish counterpart angrily condemning the racist fans.

He said: "I would like to see him ask the Spanish FA to condemn the scenes we witnessed in the Bernabeu."

"I also expect FIFA and UEFA to fully investigate this. There is no place for racism in football or modern society."

After trying to play down the race-hate shame for most of the day, Spanish football chiefs finally found the courage to issue a very weak condemnation of a "small group of Spanish supporters".

If these had been English fans we'd now be facing an immediate footie ban

Rooney is Press fall guy

THE Spanish Press were more interested in making fun of Wayne Rooney yesterday than in shaming their racist fans.

Most newspapers hardly mentioned the shocking abuse heaped on England's black players.

Instead they blasted

England's tough tackling – singling out Rooney as the main culprit.

Leading sports daily As dubbed him "Rooney Foreman" after legendary boxer George Foreman.

Rival Marca headlined its page four: "Rooney se volvió loco" – Rooney went mad.

DAILY STAR says

Kick them out NOW

DAGOS, greasebags, serial gropers, leather-skinned, workshy donkey killers.

If England fans had taunted the Spanish with such racist slurs there would be uproar in Madrid. Rightly so.

But there was a worrying silence from that quarter yesterday after England's five black players endured a barrage of racist abuse from Spanish supporters.

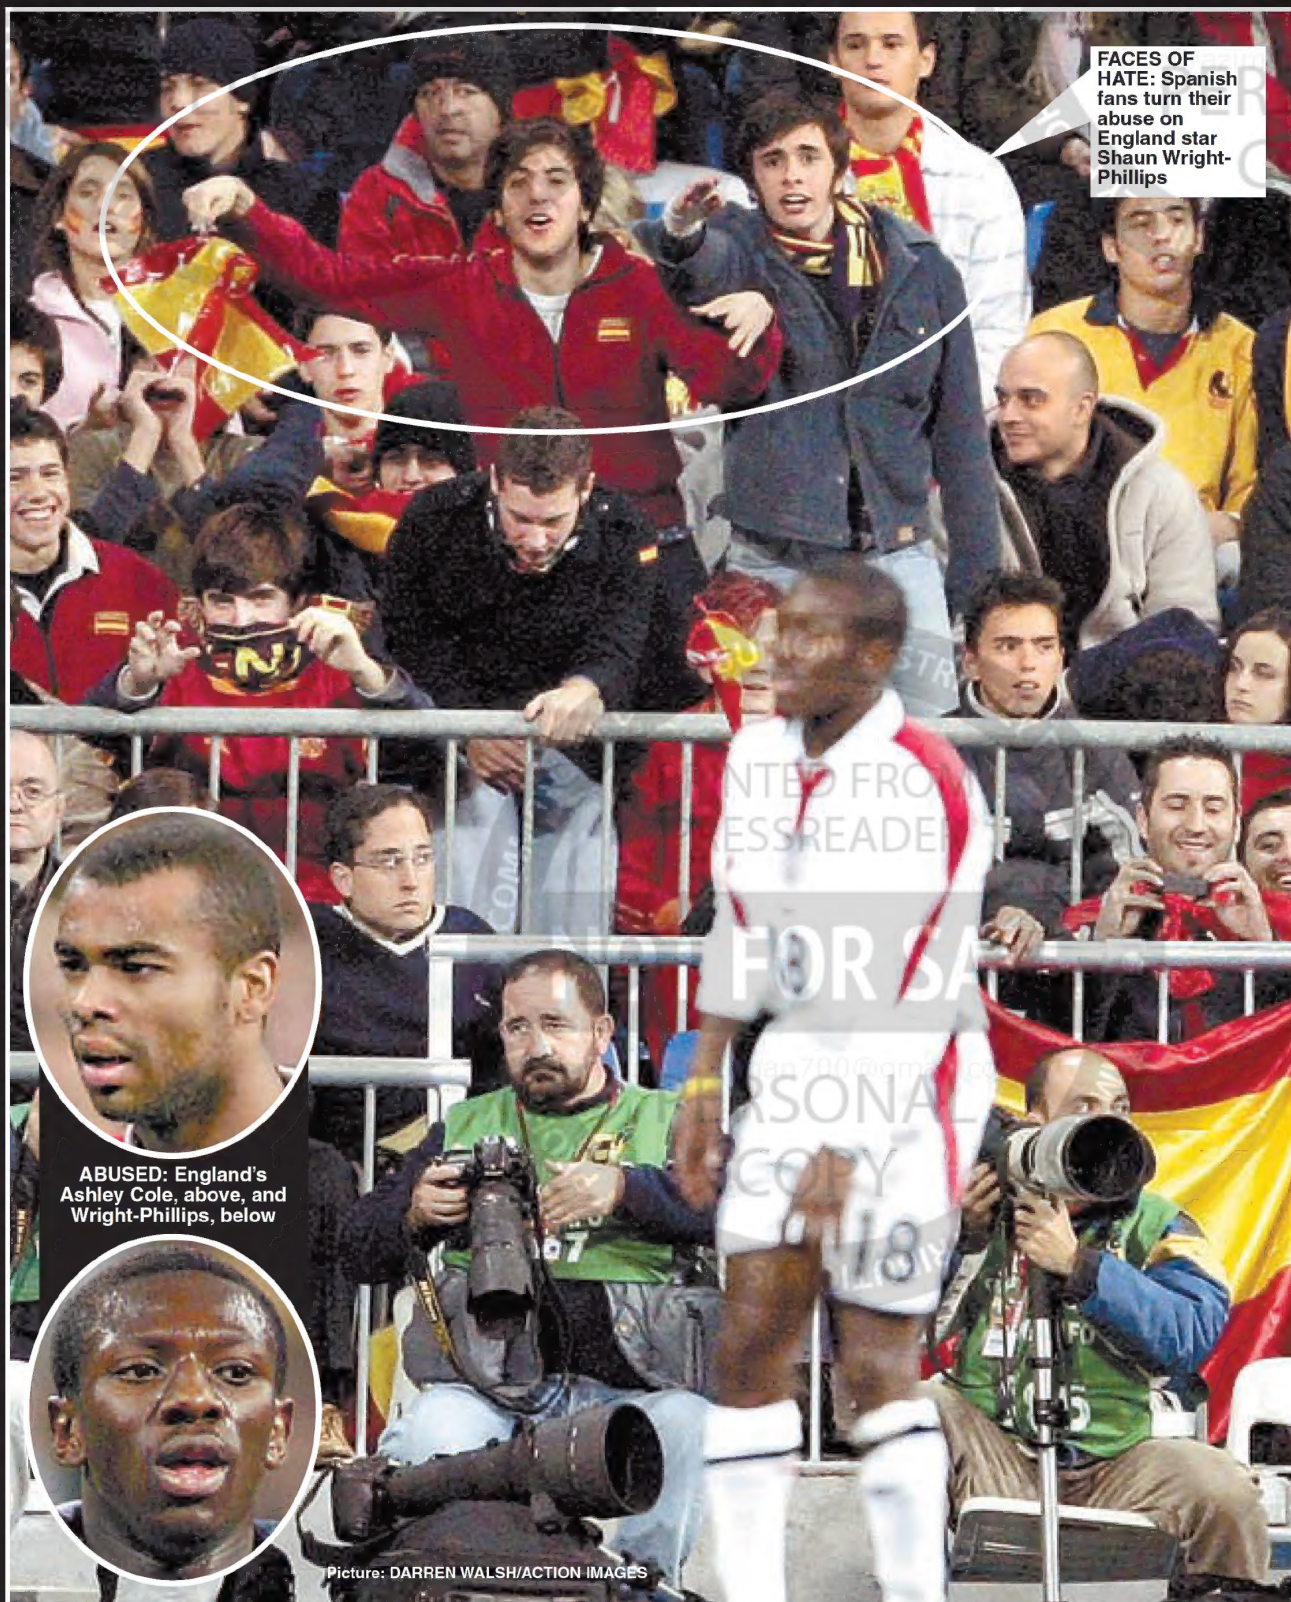

Ashley Cole and his team were subjected to monkey chants every time they touched the ball. The failure of Spain's authorities to condemn this outrage is shocking.

Newspapers, politicians and the football association of this one-time fascist nation have all brushed it aside, suggesting that racism has crept back in from top to bottom.

Spain's manager Luis Aragones is a leading example. This cretin still refuses to apologise for calling Arsenal's Thierry Henry a "black s". Fifa, football's governing body, must come down hard on the Spanish to try and force a change in attitude.

They should ban them from internationals for a year.

FACES OF HATE: Spanish fans turn their abuse on England star Shaun Wright-Phillips

Tackle scum rabble

ENGLAND fans yesterday condemned racist Spanish supporters.

Writer Lisa Bessant, 27, of Clifton, Bristol, raged: "Spain should be suspended from international football if they don't take serious steps towards tackling this problem."

Systems analyst John Daniels, 27, of Arncliffe, Bristol, said:

"England did the right thing by ignoring it. 'I thought the way that Shaun Wright-Phillips played his heart out through it all was very dignified.'"

Horrible

Gary Mayes, 32, a fitter from Newcastle, said: "If it was the other way round the English would have been slaughtered for being racist."

Michael Egglestone, 49, a lecturer at the University of Durham, said: "I think it is up to FIFA to stamp it out. You have to be able to control your supporters."

Shop assistant Natalie Clough, 19, from Liverpool, said: "Someone needs to take a stand against this."

Lighting technician Ian Ellerby, 39, from Scarborough, north Yorks, said: "It's the worst racism I've ever heard at a football stadium."

Andrew Gravell, 31, an IT administrator from Manchester, said: "It was disgusting. 'Racism is wrong.'"

KILLING 'LIKE A MOVIE SCENE'

■ by TONY LEONARD
THE murder of Pc Ian Broadhurst was like "something you'd see in a movie," an eyewitness told the jury. Tow-truck driver Simon Furniss told how he watched helplessly as the gunman stood above the stricken bobby, carefully took aim, and shot him in the head. As Pc Broadhurst lay dead Mr Furniss ran for his life - fearing he would become the killer's next victim. He had been called to the scene to impound the gunman's BMW and had just strapped the car onto his truck when a shot rang out from a police car 30ft away. He said: "I heard a bang. I looked round and the bang seemed to come from the police car. "I then saw an officer on the floor. He had his back to me and he was crying out in pain. "He was moving his arm when I heard another bang. "I noticed there was a man dressed in black standing behind the officer holding what I believed was a gun. "I then heard another shot which appeared to be aimed at the officer. I thought it was towards the officer's belt - the lower part of his body. "The man was stood behind the officer about 2ft away." Robert Smith QC, prosecuting, asked: "How close to the officer was he standing?" Mr Furniss replied: "He was standing right behind the officer, with his legs apart, holding the gun with both his arms forward. "It was clear the gun was pointing at the officer's head. "He then fired again and the officer stopped moving." Mr Smith asked: "Are you able to tell us how the gun was fired?" The recoveryman said: "It was something you'd see in a movie." Mr Smith asked: "How many shots in total did you hear?" The recoveryman replied: "I thought I heard around about seven."

VICTIM: Pc Broadhurst

Cop tells murder jury of gun terror

A POLICEMAN told a jury yesterday how he ran for his life from a gunman who murdered his partner.

Pc Neil Roper, 45, went to handcuff a suspected car thief and found himself staring down the barrel of a gun.

The stunned bobby told Newcastle Crown Court: "Just as I looked there was a black handgun coming into my face."

Pain

Pc Roper said he ran for his life and heard two shots. He said: "They were the two shots that hit me."

"I remember shouting 'gun' and then feeling pain."

The Pc had tried to arrest the suspect with his partner Pc Ian Broadhurst and back-up officer Pc James Banks.

The first bullet that hit him entered his lower spine and ruptured his bowel.

Despite the serious injury the policeman kept on running as the gunman fired again. He said: "I knew I'd been shot. I heard the bang. I felt violent pain and I nearly fell down.

■ by JERRY LAWTON

"I remember grabbing my radio, pressing the panic button and shouting: 'I have been shot.' It was just instinct. "I just felt a searing pain at the top of my arm.

"It was like my arm fell off. It was numb - just gone. "I didn't have a chance to look behind me or anything. I just knew I had been shot."

The wounded bobby staggered to a nearby block of flats and banged on the door. A shocked resident took him inside where Pc Roper desperately radioed for help and told his control room: "Check the others. Check Ian!"

Then he heard the message "officer down".

He told the jury: "I knew it wasn't me." Father-of-two Pc Roper survived after emergency surgery on his bowel and shoulder.

He spent 10 days in hospital and suffered nerve damage to his arm.

The court heard that as he fled the gunman shot Pc

Broadhurst, 34, in the chest. He then shot him in the head at point-blank range as he lay on the ground pleading for his life.

The court heard that the officer died instantly.

Pc Banks, 27, escaped when a bullet ripped through his police radio and ricocheted off his belt.

The prosecution allege David Bieber, 38, opened fire on the officers from the back of a police car after they'd arrested him in Oakwood, Leeds, on Boxing Day last year.

They allege he was at the wheel of a stolen black BMW with fake number plates.

Shooting

US-born Bieber - who had been living in Britain under the name Nathan Coleman - denies murder and two charges of attempted murder.

Bieber admits he was caught on CCTV footage in a post office at the scene moments before the shooting.

But he maintains he was not the driver of the BMW who opened fire on the officers.

Pc Roper said he decided to quiz the driver because the car was parked "erratically". He said the man arrested "was a smooth, good-looking fellow. But he just looked like an ordinary member of the public".

The Pc told the court of his growing concerns after the arrest.

He said: "He was just sitting there very cool, very calm. I was not happy."

"I knew something was wrong about him."

Pc Banks told the court he thought someone had thrown a firework at him when he heard the gun.

He told the jury that when he arrived Pc Roper told him he thought there was going to be "trouble" with the suspect.

The prosecution allege that after the shooting Bieber hijacked a car at gunpoint and fled.

The trial continues.

Scumbag scroungers evicted at last THEY EVEN TOOK THE KITCHEN SINK

A SCUMBAG family of scroungers finally cleared out of Britain's poshest council house yesterday - and took everything with them.

Cheeky beggar Janis Gabriel moved out of the palace dubbed Benefit Towers along with their illegally-gained conservatory, swimming pool, Jacuzzi and sauna.

Bailiffs arriving to evict the jobless 49-year-old mother-of-seven found the home stripped bare, with even the plug sockets, light switches, internal doors and kitchen cupboard doors gone.

Envious neighbours had been quietly eyeing up the family's 42in plasma TV, four-poster waterbed, luxury leather suite and crystal chandelier - but they all went too. All the money-grabbing Gabriels left seemed to be their pet mouse, seen scuttling up their carpet stripped staircase.

■ by JOHN MAHONEY

Police and housing association staff arriving to evict Gabriel, her disabled husband John, 51, and three of their kids found they had already sloped off.

But Janis then appeared while they were boarding up the house in Burnley, Lancs, to hand over the keys to the pad they didn't even pay any rent on.

She is facing up to 14 years in jail when she appears in court next month after being convicted of possessing criminal property.

Burnley Crown Court had heard how the super-sponger claimed she didn't know what to do with all the £26,728 she received in state handouts every year - so she splashed out tarting up her house.

She claimed the Government was giving them more benefits than they needed adding: "We got into a routine how we lived."

Hatred

When police raided their home they found £10,000 in £20 notes stashed under the waterbed and £6,070 in a case.

Over 12 years the couple had transformed the modest home into a palace - yet they became figures of hatred among neighbours who called her "Jangling Jan" because she was always awash with dosh.

But a jury decided her life of luxury was funded from the proceeds of crime rather than too many benefits.

Police yesterday discovered a secret hatch under the stairs which they are convinced was used as a store for stolen property.

One official said: "Usually you expect quite a lot of stuff, certainly fixtures and fittings, to be left behind, but this was completely bare. They must have been working round the clock to get the conservatory down and the pool out."

It is believed the Gabriels have moved into private rented property.

BLOOD: Defendant Forde

'Vampire' torment of girl, 13

A SCHOOLGIRL has told how she was attacked by a "vampire" who slashed her with a razor blade then sucked her blood.

Leon Forde, 20, allegedly told the girl to turn away from him, saying he wanted to "try something".

Seconds later she felt a sharp pain and realised she had been cut across her back with a razor blade, a jury was told.

The 13-year-old girl, who cannot be named for legal reasons, told Lincoln Crown Court: "I shouted out and stumbled forward. 'I fell on his bed. He grabbed me. Then he just sucked it up'."

Forde, from Lincoln, denies two charges of assault causing actual bodily harm. He also denies two rapes, an indecent assault and five charges of having sex with an under-age girl.

The trial continues.

RACHEL'S A BAND AID IMPOSTER

CHEEKY S CLUBBER CRASHES THE PARTY

FORMER S Clubber Rachel Stevens was never invited to take part in Band Aid 20 - she crashed the party by turning up on the arm of pal Will Young, we can exclusively reveal.

The ballsy 26-year-old singer arrived at London's Air studios with the boring Pop Idol winner as if she was invited.

But when organisers of the project realised what Funky Dory singer Rach was doing they were too embarrassed to tell her to get lost.

Best

So Stevens - the only member of S Club to enjoy a modicum of success as a solo artist - sang along to the new version of Do They Know It's Christmas? with the all-star line-up that included U2's Bono, Robbie Williams, Fran Healy of Travis and, of course, dowdy Young.

A source close to the charity organisation said: "People were obviously shocked."

"They weren't expecting her but they were put in a very awkward situation. It was agreed that the best thing would be to let her continue because it would ruin what was otherwise a fantastic day.

"It would have been more hassle than it was worth to throw her out of the recording. It was agreed that it didn't really matter."

And we couldn't agree more. Rachel, who goes out with Gavin Dein, son of the Arsenal chairman David Dein, has hardly lit up the pop world.

After going in at No 2 with Sweet Dreams (My LA Ex), she faced the dumper after the lame album title track Funky Dory limped into the top 20 but she was only rescued from the bargain bin by Richard X's Some Girls track.

That, along with her balls of steel, could mean that pop's most boring and bland lady (well, she did have to be interviewed three times by GQ magazine before she was deemed slightly interesting) could be around for a little while yet.

As they paid their last respects at Trinity Parish Church in Cowdenbeath, Fife, they were told how the father-of-two had acted as a "peacemaker" during his 12 years in the Army.

ENGAGED: Cheyane

Aisle be home to say 'I do'

PRIVATE Cheyane Cope-land has an extra reason for wanting to get home from Camp Dogwood - she is engaged to be married.

As she cradles her SA-80 rifle, the 24-year-old, can't help sneaking a peek at the heart-shaped ring from her fiancé Waydall Walker, 23, reminding her that a happy and safer life is waiting at home.

Cheyane, from Norwood, south-east London, said: "I'm going to have a big white wedding."

Plan

"That's what keeps me going sometimes - just thinking about it. I'm going to do my invitations when I get back. Waydall proposed to me on my 21st birthday and I think the wedding will be next Christmas."

"I miss him a lot and we e-mail every day."

Private Shelly-Ann Berry, 23, also serving at Dogwood, will be a bridesmaid.

She said: "It's going to be big. We'll plan it when we get back."

DNA TESTS were yesterday being carried out on the mutilated body of a woman found in Iraq.

The hacked-up body, found in trouble spot Fallujah, has been taken out of the country - and tests will identify if it is kidnapped aid worker Margaret Hassan.

Dublin-born Mrs Hassan, who had lived and worked in Iraq for 30 years, was taken hostage by a terrorist group last month. A video allegedly showing the blindfolded charity worker, 59, being shot through the head was released by the group on Tuesday and sent to Arab TV station al Jazeera.

Officials are 85% sure the body is that of Mrs Hassan who had devoted her life to helping the people of Iraq.

Suffering

She was working for Australian charity Care International in Iraq at the time of her kidnap.

Mrs Hassan's husband Tahseen and her family in Kenmare, County Kerry, have said they believe the remains to be hers.

They said: "Our hearts are broken. At last her suffering has ended." The body was found by a US Marine as troops swept through Iraq.

The age and height match those of Mrs Hassan. Forensic and dental checks have been carried out.

Mrs Hassan, who had British, Irish and Iraqi citizenship, was driving to work with the charity when she was seized by gunmen.

RAPE GANG MADE ME COPY PORN FILM SEX

ACCUSED: Ex QPR player Terrell Forbes arriving at court yesterday

A GANG of footballers forced a terrified schoolgirl to re-enact scenes from an X-rated porn video during a 24-hour rape ordeal, a court heard yesterday.

The girl said the group - which included former Queen's Park Rangers ace Terrell Forbes - made her watch the tape as they abused her.

Speaking from behind a screen at Kingston Crown Court, Surrey, the girl said her attackers threatened to chop her up and bury her if she refused their demands.

The jury heard that the girl, who is now 16 but was 15 at the time of the attack in March, was filmed as she performed a host of degrading sex acts.

She added the men had earlier watched a home-made porn video of a woman committing the acts she was forced to perform. She told a hushed court room: "The positions they have done with me were in that video."

"They said they knew the people in it. I knew that because they were saying their names."

She said up to 12 men took it in turns to attack her at a flat in Brockley, south-east London, belonging to co-defendant Philip Mighton.

Prisoner

The girl, who was supposed to be at a friend's funeral during part of the ordeal, was made to smile and "act happy" for the camcorder as they abused her.

Speaking in a trembling voice, she also told how she was forced to watch DVD snuff movies. She said one of her attackers had said: "We are killers, you know."

She added: "Then he said: 'Oh you think we are joking - we will chop you up and put you under the floorboards.'"

She told the jury she had thought he was joking, but became scared when they put the video on, which showed images of people and animals being cut up.

Throughout her time in the flat she said she was "just frightened" and felt she could not leave because she "felt like a prisoner". She added that some of them threatened her with a foot-long wooden cosh topped by a metal duck's head.

by TOM SAVAGE

Earlier, she detailed a terrifying catalogue of abuse by a series of attackers that had left her bruised and bleeding.

It included being forced to give oral sex to one man on a duvet in the living room while another sexually abused her and a third one sucked her breasts.

Grimsby Town defender Forbes, 23, denies one count of rape.

Fellow former QPR trainee Shane Sutherland, 21, non-league Tooting and Mitcham player Darren Wallace, 23, and former Charlton player Kevin George, 21, also deny one charge of rape.

Philip Mighton, 23, denies three counts of rape and Ashley Campbell, 21, denies two charges of rape.

Attack

The court was told how Sutherland had picked the girl up at a youth club in Euston, north London, to take her home, but instead took her to Mighton's flat in Brockley.

Once at the flat she said Forbes dragged her by her right arm to the bathroom where he forced her to have sex.

She said she became aware her back was hurting, telling the court: "I told him my back was hurting and he said to wait until he had finished."

Hospital tests later showed she was bleeding from friction burns to her spine.

The girl said she then saw Sutherland with a video camera and was told by him to "say hi" and introduce herself, and to "act happy" for the camera.

Earlier the girl told the court how the men took turns to rape her during the attack which began on March 4, urging each other on with shouts of "go on, go on".

She said other men came to the house after her attackers contacted them, saying: "Come, we've got dessert for you."

The following morning she used £15 that Forbes had given her to get a taxi, which took her back to Euston where a friend met her and called the police.

The case continues.

'Then they threatened to chop me up and bury my body under floorboards'

MoD hit for six

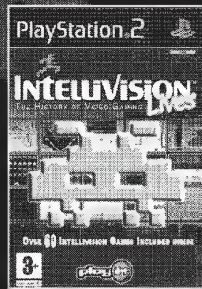

DEFENCE chiefs told off old six-wheeled vehicles for £3,000 - then had to quickly buy them back at £17,000 for Iraq.

The MoD also spent £18,000 upgrading them for the Allied invasion but they were fixed too late for the war. So the bunglers then sold them off again for £6,500 each.

The shocking waste was revealed yesterday in a National Audit Office report on "urgent operational requirements" - a quick way of buying equipment that is needed in a hurry.

Boy's hidden gun

A 14-YEAR-OLD boy has been caught carrying a gun into lessons at a secondary school.

Fellow pupils alerted a teacher after spotting the starter pistol in the teenager's bag and both the pupil and the bag were quickly taken from the classroom.

Police were called to the Admiral Lord Nelson School in Portsmouth, Hants, to question the boy, who has now been excluded for three weeks. The pupil claimed he found the pistol in a field.

Associate headteacher Steven Labeledz said: "We have not had an incident like this before."

TO DO BEFORE YOU DIE

WISHES: Moore

FAMOUS scientists have made with a list of 100 brainy things to do before you die.

Wishes include walking in a dinosaur's footprints and listening to a the birth of an iceberg.

They even suggest things to do after death such as turning your ashes into a diamond.

Bank con hits 1m

NATWEST Bank suspended part of its internet banking service yesterday to stop a massive fraud.

Around a million customers with online accounts received bogus e-mails asking them to part with secret personal banking information.

Security chiefs at Natwest acted immediately to prevent customers setting up new direct debits or standing orders which would have allowed their money to be transferred out of the country. A spokesman said: "We took immediate action."

21 migrants held

IMMIGRATION officers were quizzing 21 people last night after they raided vans carrying Nepalese and West African workers.

It is believed the men and women were failed asylum seekers and illegal entrants who have been working in food-processing and packing factories in Kent.

They were arrested on immigration charges after police and immigration officers stopped the vans in Plumstead, south London.

A UK immigration services spokesman said several work agencies are now being investigated.

BAND IT TO 'EM

MILLIONS of viewers tuned in for a first glimpse of the new Band Aid20 video last night.

The music event of the decade was screened on all five terrestrial channels and 20 satellite stations at 5.55pm.

The video was presented by Madonna and featured performances from Robbie Williams, Joss Stone, Rachel Stevens, Will Young and the Sugababes.

A spokeswoman said the "completely unprecedented" broadcast showed how much the entertainment industry was backing the record.

Viewers saw their pop heroes recording in the studio and images from the famine in Sudan which will benefit from the charity track. The new recording of Do They Know It's Christmas? will hit the shops on November 29 and is tipped to be the Christmas No.1.

Last night's video of the song also featured contributions from Paul McCartney, Dido, The Darkness and Bono, who belted out the famous line: "Well tonight thank God it's them instead of you."

Security around the release has been the tightest on record to prevent black market trading. Bookmakers have lengthened the odds on the track's long-term success following poor reviews from critics.

But it is hoped the video's screening last night will help boost sales and those of the Live Aid DVD, which was recently released.

FRANZ FERDINAND – Cube Bar

FRANZ FERDINAND played a red-hot gig in Rome. Superstar rapper Kanye West, who watched the boys play hits including Take Me Out, told me: "I'm a huge fan. Their music rocks. And my mom loves them too." Intimate, sweaty and the best Franz Ferdinand gig I've ever seen.

Put Em

STAR AND MTV CLASH OVER HIS YOUNG GUNS

EMINEM caused uproar at the MTV Europe Music Awards 2004 in Rome with a performance featuring children brandishing guns.

The rapper, whose band D12 were named Best Hip-Hop, spent the build-up to his set arguing with MTV bosses over his performance of Like Toy Soldiers and Just Lose It.

I'm told: "Eminem wanted to be as shocking and provocative as possible. He devised the stage show that featured lots of young children on stage with firearms in their hands.

"Then he had nearly 40 following him around on stage during Just Lose It, in a bid to mimic Michael Jackson's infamous Brits performance.

"TV people in Italy felt it was too strong and fought with him to make him do a calmer show. He was livid and threatened to walk out until they agreed to his idea."

All the attention has put the rapper in line for another week at the top of our album charts. Encore is still shifting more than Britney's greatest hits.

While Eminem, 32, was busy causing drama, Usher was caught up in his own kind of A-list strife in Rome. The R&B sensation had a bust-up with Radio 1's Trevor Nelson.

Usher, 26, didn't take kindly to the DJ chatting to his girlfriend Naomi Campbell, 34, at the MTV pre-show party in the flash La Maison Club.

Trevor's radio pal Edith Bowman revealed: "Usher was grinding away on the dancefloor and Naomi was sat in the corner looking really miserable, like she'd been slapped by a wet fish."

Shouted

"Trevor went over and said, 'Are you all right?'"

"Next thing, Usher marched over and shouted, 'What are you doing to my girl? Move away from my girl!'"

"Trevor was like, 'What are you talking about? Calm down!' while Naomi just sat there."

Seems like Usher is turning from ladies' man to a bit of a wuss.

He told Italian Vanity Fair: "I met Naomi three months ago and it was like I had been hit by a lightning bolt."

"We have a real special, special relationship."

"Naomi is a beautiful woman and I like her a lot."

All a bit strange, considering that a partygoer told me: "After Usher and Naomi posed for pictures they went into the party and barely spoke to each other. It was totally staged."

Meanwhile N*E*R*D, Maroon 5 and Tim Kash were knocking back the booze, and I saw MTV bloke Tim leave the venue with two blondes at 3am.

WHO GOT WHAT

OUTKAST were the flavour of the night at the MTV Europe Music Awards after scooping three top wins.

They took Best Group and Best Song and Video for Hey Ya.

Flying the flag for Blighty were Muse.

The rockers took home Best Alternative Act and Best UK and Ireland Act.

Usher managed half the gongs he did at the American Music Awards earlier this week, taking Best Male and Best Album for Confessions.

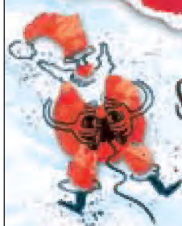

And while Britney might be in semi-retirement her Best Female triumph showed she's still so Lucky.
